Zombie-like Poconos attack by naked man

Police arrested a Doylestown man after he allegedly took off his clothing, broke into a home and jumped out its window, then gnawed on a woman's head while covered in blood.

Investigators said Richard Ciminio Jr. drove his vehicle off the roadway and behind a home in Wayne County sometime between 4:30 a.m. and 5:15 a.m. on Sept. 7. He got out of the car, stripped off down to his underwear and left his clothes in a grass field.

Ciminio eventually took off his underwear, allegedly broke in through the front door of an unoccupied home on the street, went upstairs to its second floor and jumped out the window, severely injuring his arms and legs.

Bleeding profusely, the man then hid in the garage of the home for some time until he saw two women walking down the street, authorities said. Ciminio then allegedly tackled Dean-Corino, knocking her down and covering her in his blood.

According to a police report, "The accused began to gnaw at Dean-Corino's head and screaming like an animal." Both women were able to escape and call police from a nearby home. METRO/AW

When river otters attack

PENNSYLVANIA. State Game Commission officials are investigating a baffling river otter attack on a Venango County fisherman.

The fisherman, 27, was wading near the junction of French Creek and the Allegheny River when, around 2 p.m. on Monday, he saw a river otter near the bike trail. "The otter then turned and swam directly toward him. He made noise and slapped the water with his fishing rod unsuccessfully. The otter dove and proceeded to bite and scratch the victim," a gaming official said. METRO/AW

Top court weighs Pa. voter ID law

Lawyers, Supreme Court justices debated merits of law inside Philly City Hall ◐ Outside, hundreds protested law many feel disproportionately hinders poor

Pennsylvania's new voter ID law "impermissibly" violates a fundamental right, an attorney for the American Civil Liberties Union and 10 citizen-plaintiffs told the state's Supreme Court.

Arguments came Thursday in an appeal by the ACLU of a lower court's Aug. 15 decision upholding the law, which requires voters to show government-issued photo identification before casting a ballot. The court hasn't set a deadline for issuing a decision.

Pennsylvania is one of nine states requiring voters to show a state-issued ID before casting a ballot. Last month, Commonwealth Court Judge Richard Simpson denied a request to block the law, ruling that the ACLU failed to prove it would disenfranchise voters.

Seventeen states require voters to present some kind of photo ID. Proponents argue the law passed by Pennsylvania's Republican-controlled legislature is needed to stop voter fraud and enhance the integrity of elections.

The ACLU and advocacy groups, including the Advancement Project and the Public Interest Law Center of Philadelphia, say the measure keeps some likely Democratic voters away from the polls.

"The problem for the commonwealth in this situation is that they are burdening the right to vote," David Gersch, a lawyer for the plaintiffs, told the six-justice panel in Philadelphia.

But legislators should be given "considerable deference" over the substance and timing of the law, John Knorr, the state's chief deputy attorney general, countered. BLOOMBERG

RIKARD LARMA/METRO

▶ Protesters believe the state legislature passed the law with an ulterior motive in mind.

"Not everything that affects that right is fundamental. Fashioning the regulatory framework is the job of the legislature." KNORR

'Burden is quite minimal'

Knorr also discounted as "fantasy" reports that as many as 1.5 million people may be unable to vote in the state on Nov. 6.

"The burden to me is quite minimal," he said. "Most people can get photo IDs quite easily. We haven't had any evidence of a single real person who can't get this."

Most if not all of the 10 plaintiffs have some form of photo ID, Knorr said.

Both McCaffery and Todd asked lawyers whether spreading enforcement of the law over two federal election cycles would alleviate any potential burden.

Yes, if all qualified electors are assured an ID, Gersch said. "Those things are matters for the general assembly," Knorr said. BLOOMBERG

Battleground votes at stake

Laws requiring photo identification to vote in battleground states including Pennsylvania and Florida could be the deciding factor in the Nov. 6 presidential election, according to a study released Sept. 11 by researchers at Washington University in St. Louis and the University of Chicago. As many as 700,000 young minority voters nationwide could be kept from the polls by voter ID laws in several states, according to the study.

A state analysis found the photo requirement might exclude as much as 9 percent of Pennsylvania's electorate from voting in the presidential election.

Democratic President Barack Obama carried Pennsylvania, which has 20 of the 270 Electoral College votes needed to win the presidency, by 620,478 votes in 2008, fewer than the number who might be kept from the polls this November, according to the law's challengers. BLOOMBERG

'Fifty feet ... or the speed of light'

Red Bull's wacky, wild annual Flugtag event back on Delaware River this weekend ◗ Metro caught up again with last year's most controversial participants

PHOTOS: PAIGE OZAROSKI/METRO

▶ The New Kids on the Dock put finishing touches on their "Dock Lobster" craft this week.

Try all they want, Major League Baseball can't stop them this time.

Last year — two days before the event — Jon Notte, Adam Denard, Dan White, Tim Muir and Bryan Reese got a call from MLB telling them to chop off the head on their Phillie Phanatic-inspired Red Bull Flugtag craft. They did; and then failed miserably.

But the fearsome fivesome is back with a brand-new invention. The crew has reinvented themselves, choosing to spend the last few months patrolling the Delaware River disguised as the nautical, crime-fighting boy band, New Kids on the Dock.

"NKOTD saves lives, that's what we do," Denard said. "We're out there to bring joy to the people, but take their breath away with our looks and our dance moves."

Each member has a specialty, too. Denard is the pilot. Notte is the zoologist. Muir is the craftsman. White is the playboy. Reese ... well, he can get you anything you want.

"You want lobster skin? He's got five pounds of it ready, waiting," Denard said.

When asked, 'What do you do with lobster skin?' Denard replied, "What don't you do with lobster skin?"

Fair enough. The competition will be judged on three criteria: the distance you fly, how funny your skit is and how cool your craft looks. Denard will sit atop the lobster Saturday when Red Bull Flugtag invades the Camden Waterfront, just as he did last year on the headless Phanatic.

And hopefully they aren't breaking any copyright laws this time around.

"We're hoping not to get into trouble with New Kids on the Block, but we think they're cool with it," Denard said.

"We want to break 50 feet, possibly break the speed of light or sound, any record. Our underlying goal is redemption from last time, so we're going for straight victory."

ADAM DENARD, NKOTD SPOKESMAN AND PILOT

'Dock Lobster' to take flight?

The band's name was inspired by Denard's girlfriend, but he admitted that all members have a great appreciation for boy bands.

NKOTD has spent more than 80 hours building their craft, a 30-foot lobster, which consists of PVC pipe, cardboard, wire, paper mache and red spray paint. It also features sailcloth for the wings to ensure it won't sink once it hits the water.

They have dubbed the craft "Dock Lobster."

"We're close [to it being finished]," Denard said Wednesday. "Just have to paint the wings and draw some big, big anchors on there." ● METRO/MG

Kenney proposes 'Hero Panel' for line of duty deaths

Philly councilman suggests committee to expediate, perhaps also expand, how city deals with police officer, firefighter deaths He's also critical of city bureaucracy

RIKARD LARMA/METRO

Kenney said families of public servants should never have to wait for the city.

Councilman Jim Kenney announced at the City Council's first session on Thursday that he wants to reform the way line-of-duty deaths are reviewed for city firefighters, police officers and paramedics.

"The two deaths we've had recently, both police officers — one was Officer Lorenzo in his uniform on his bike on a highway; the other one was Officer Walker, who was trying to pull a service revolver to stop two armed robbers from robbing him, but could have been stopping them from robbing anybody else — I think those are two clearly, easily decided situations, that they were in fact killed in the line of duty," Kenney said Thursday. But, he said, in Officer Brian Lorenzo's case, it took more than three weeks for his death to be designated in the line of duty. In the case of Officer Moses Walker Jr., the decision took more than two weeks.

In a bill that was referred to a City Council committee on Thursday, Kenney proposed the creation of a Hero Panel, with one independent member and one member each appointed by Mayor Michael Nutter, City Council President Darrell Clarke, the Fraternal Order of Police Lodge No. 5 and firefighters and paramedics Local 22.

"I think if we have a panel, it will make that decision in a reasonable fashion but in a quick way so we can assure these families that they're going to be taken care of."
CITY COUNCILMAN JIM KENNEY

Kenney also addressed the deaths of firefighters Daniel Sweeney and Lt. Robert Neary, killed while battling a warehouse blaze in April. "My understanding is, for Lt. Neary and Firefighter Sweeney, paperwork for federal benefits need to filled out at the fire headquarters," he said. "They're still sitting on somebody's desk. That's $400,000 each that their families can get. Certainly, it won't bring them back and it's not going to make up for their loss, but I think people need to be made as whole as possible so we show them that we respect the sacrifices that they made."

Also proposed

Here is some other legislation that was discussed at the City Council's first session this fall:

- A bill by Council President Darrell Clarke would further regulate city honeybee exterminators (yes, this is real).
- Council unanimously overrode Mayor Michael Nutter's veto of a bill originally passed June 21 that allows Finnigan's Wake, a bar with past ties to local Democratic Party officials, to construct 61-foot balconies on its second and third floors.
- Two resolutions introduced by Councilwoman Blondell Reynolds Brown created hearings on the proliferation of street peddling by minor children and to investigate human trafficking in Philadelphia, which has been designated a "high incidence" area by the FBI.
- Councilman Wilson Goode Jr. proposed reducing real estate tax abatements from 10 to five years and lowering it by 20 percent each year.

Actress claimed she was duped

The origins of a crudely made anti-Muslim movie that sparked violent protests in Egypt and Libya began to slowly emerge on Wednesday, with an actress in the California production saying she was duped and was unaware it was about the Prophet Mohammad.

Cindy Lee Garcia of Bakersfield, Calif., who appears briefly in clips of the film posted online, said she answered a casting call last year to appear in a movie titled "Desert Warrior."

"It looks so unreal to me, it's like nothing that we even filmed was there. There was all this weird stuff there," Garcia told Reuters in a phone interview.

Clips of the movie, posted on YouTube under several titles including "Innocence of Muslims," portrayed the Muslim prophet engaged in crude and offensive behavior. Many Muslims consider any depiction of the prophet as blasphemous. REUTERS

▶ Yemeni protesters try to break through the U.S. embassy in Sanaa during a protest over a film mocking Islam on Sept. 13.

Demonstrators attacked the U.S. embassies in Yemen and Egypt on Thursday in protest at a film they consider blasphemous to Islam, and American warships headed toward Libya after the U.S. ambassador there was killed in related violence this week.

In Libya, authorities said they had made four arrests in the investigation into the attack that killed ambassador Christopher Stevens and three other Americas in Benghazi on Tuesday.

President Barack Obama has vowed to bring to justice those responsible for the Benghazi attack, which U.S. officials said may have been planned in advance.

U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton said Washington had nothing to do with the crudely made film posted on the Internet, which she called "disgusting and reprehensible."

The amateurish production, entitled the "Innocence of Muslims," and originating in the United States, portrays Mohammad as a womanizer, a homosexual and a child abuser.

For many Muslims, any depiction of the prophet is blasphemous and caricatures or other characterizations have in the past provoked violent protests across the Muslim world.

Demonstrations spread further on Thursday, with U.S. embassies again the targets of popular anger among Muslims questioning why the United States has failed to take action against the makers of the film.

Hundreds of Yemenis broke through the main gate of the heavily fortified U.S. embassy compound in the capital Sanaa, shouting: "We sacrifice ourselves for you, messenger of God." They smashed windows of security offices outside the embassy and burned cars.

A security source said at least 15 people were wounded, some by gunfire, before the government ringed the area with troops.

In Egypt, protesters hurled stones at a police cordon around the U.S. embassy in central Cairo after climbing into the embassy compound and tearing down the American flag. The state news agency said 13 people were hurt in violence which erupted late on Wednesday, following initial protests on Tuesday. REUTERS

Romney: US 'at mercy of events'

Republican presidential candidate Mitt Romney criticized President Barack Obama's handling of foreign policy on Thursday after four Americans were killed in Libya, saying the United States seems at the mercy of world events.

Romney made a case for a stronger U.S. military at a campaign rally in northern Virginia, an area that could play a deciding role in who wins the Nov. 6 presidential election.

But the former governor of Massachusetts stopped short of repeating charges that Obama is apologizing to America's enemies.

"As we watch the world today, sometimes it seems that we're at the mercy of events, instead of shaping events," he said in Fairfax, a suburb of Washington, D.C. REUTERS

Health adviser admits 'mistake' in political probe

Health and Human Services Secretary Kathleen Sebelius admits she made a mistake during remarks in February that investigators say violated a federal law restricting the political activities of government employees.

Sebelius, who is spearheading the implementation of President Barack Obama's healthcare reform law, warned at a meeting of the Human Rights Campaign that progress made on gay and lesbian rights under Obama could be "wiped out in a heartbeat" if the president was not reelected in November.

She also called for the election of a Democratic governor in North Carolina. Human Rights Campaign represents people who are gay, lesbian, bisexual or transgender.

"Secretary Sebelius violated the Hatch Act by making extemporaneous political remarks," investigators concluded in a report. The findings are unlikely to lead to disciplinary action against Sebelius but could provide fodder for Republicans, who oppose the Democratic Party's embrace of homosexual rights issues. REUTERS

FIGHTING WORDS GO GLOBAL

I am not easily offended. You can ridicule my clothes, my car, my ideas, my profession, my dog and my religion, and the most you'll get from me is a snarky comment. I certainly won't rally an angry mob to start torching cars, attacking buildings or visiting violence upon helpless souls who are merely doing their duty.

Maybe it is a side effect of my job; after all, you get used to being kicked after thirty years in the media. Maybe my skin is naturally thick. But I think more than all of that, it is because I have lived my entire life in a free society. And freedom means learning not to be offended so easily, even over the things you consider sacred.

One of the cornerstones of free society is free speech. That means anyone can say pretty much anything he or she wants to say, including comments that are cruel, racist, one-sided and bigoted. If you need evidence, just turn on talk radio. In fact, this freedom is specifically aimed at such language because, when you think about it, no one needs legal protection to say, "Nice day isn't it?" or "I think I'll have a slice of pie!"

Free speech can not be legally used for inciting violence, of course. If someone turns on the reality TV show "Here Comes Honey Boo Boo," I can say, "You're an idiot." But I can't whip everyone else into a fury to go tip his car over. (Oddly enough, it seems like most of the serious car-tipping in this country comes after a sports team wins a title, and the fans are happy. Go figure.)

My career has been based on free speech in all its forms, and whether I agree with what is being said or not. It is a freedom that Americans have fought and died for, and it's one that millions of people defend every day.

Here is the thing though: Not everyone in the world values or defines free speech precisely the way we do, as the events overseas this week made plain. And what some of us may see as provocative, opinionated or thoughtful, others may see as fighting words.

Agreement near in Chicago teacher strike

But it was unlikely students would be back in school before Monday even if a tentative deal was struck today. REUTERS

ABC News hit by $1.2B defamation suit over 'pink slime' reports

ABC News was hit with a $1.2 billion defamation lawsuit on Thursday by a South Dakota meat processor that accused it of misleading viewers into believing that a product that critics have dubbed "pink slime" was unsafe.

Beef Products Inc. sued over ABC reports aired in March and April about the company and its "lean finely textured beef."

In court papers, the company said ABC falsely told viewers that the beef product was not safe, not healthy and not even meat, and that the reports have cost it much of its business and hundreds of millions of dollars in profit.

"The lawsuit is without merit," Jeffrey Schneider, senior vice president of ABC News, a unit of Walt Disney Co., said in a statement. "We will contest it vigorously."

"These kinds of cases are hard to win, because courts have given media many protections in reporting on matters of public concern."

BRUCE ROSEN, A PARTNER AND MEDIA LAW SPECIALIST AT MCCUSKER, ANSELMI, ROSEN & CARVELLI IN FLORHAM PARK, N.J.

Six individuals were also sued, including ABC News anchor Diane Sawyer, and the reporters Jim Avila and David Kerley.

Another defendant is Gerald Zirnstein, a former U.S. Department of Agriculture microbiologist credited with coining the term "pink slime," and who appeared in ABC's reports. He could not be immediately reached for comment.

ABC conducted a "sustained and vicious disinformation campaign," Beef Products' lawyer Dan Webb, chairman of Winston & Strawn and a former U.S. attorney in Chicago, said at a press briefing.

"To call a food product slime is the most pejorative term that could be imagined," he said. "ABC's constant repetition of it, night after night after night, had a huge impact on the consuming public." REUTERS

WEEKEND

Great albums are dropping like leaves this autumn

Also in November

Alicia Keys, 'Girl on Fire'

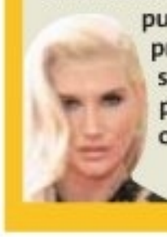
Nov. 27

Hopefully you didn't get too distracted by gold medalist Gabby Douglas tumbling all over the stage during Alicia Keys' VMAs performance last week, because behind the piano, Keys was really lighting it up. It's the singer's time to shine again. Because no one, no one, no one can get in the way of what she's feeling.

More this fall

Ke$ha

When a pop singer decides to get weird, that's fun — but when that pop singer is already weird, that's even more fun. Ke$ha has spent the past year (possibly) absorbing plenty of chemicals and (most excitingly) absorbing the musical practices of the Flaming Lips, so her official sophomore album, the title and release date of which had not been publicized at press time, should be pretty far out.



October releases

OCT. 9

Ellie Goulding, "Halcyon"

Her 2010 song "Lights" may have been the biggest sleeper hit of ... well, 2012. That is quite a sleeper hit. With her second album, the world is finally ready for this British singer, who we should point out, began dating Skrillex in the time since releasing her debut. Though he has no production credits on "Halcyon" the bond is just a hint at her willingness to go on sonic adventures. If that's the hint though, single "Anything Could Happen" is the promise.

OCT. 22

Taylor Swift, "Red"

Last week's stunning performance of the new song "Ronan" at the Stand Up To Cancer fundraiser may have been the most emotional song that Taylor Swift has ever written. That song is reportedly not on the upcoming album. If she's able to discard songs that good, we can't wait to hear the ones that did make the cut.

OCT. 23

Titus Andronicus, "Local Business"

Their last release was a concept album about the Civil War — and if you didn't hear it and this sounds especially dorky to you, it actually rocked. But this one promises to rock even more, with the band writing on their Tumblr: "'Local Business' is of the earth. Titus Andronicus the studious recording project and Titus Andronicus the raucous touring machine are no longer two distinct beings; there is only Titus Andronicus, rock and roll band." Hellz yeah!

SEPT. 18

The Killers, "Battle Born"

When critics started likening The Killers' second album to Springsteen, the comparison seemed a bit like grasping at straws — but maybe in the four years since their last studio album, the band said, "Hey, maybe we should listen to that guy everyone compared us to." Then Brandon Flowers and crew put their own glitzy spin on what they borrow from the synth-heavy notions of "Born in the U.S.A."-era Boss.

Carly Rae Jepsen, "Kiss"

While skeptics may be eager to dismiss Carly Rae Jepsen as a one-hit wonder, they should take into consideration what a HUGE hit "Call Me Maybe" was. Before she came into your life you missed her so bad, you missed her so, so bad. See? The song is so in your head right now! With the knack for a pop melody she has already shown us, how could CRJ not have more tunes that could turn sports teams onto choreography?

P!NK, "The Truth About Love"

Yes, P!NK has been combining kiss-off anthems with double entendres since day one, but instead of recycling the same thing over and over, it seems more like she has been working her whole career toward this. Tempering her usual aggression are fun collaborations (Eminem, Lily Allen) and songs that actually sound happy. Well, as happy as P!NK can be, singing lines like "I hate you so much, it must be love."

SEPT. 25

Green Day, "¡UNO!"

After an absurdly prolific winter, Green Day had enough material for three albums. Instead of paring down that material, they'll just go on ahead and release three separate albums, (appropriately titled "¡UNO!" "¡DOS!" and "¡TRE!") every other month through January. Based on the four singles already released, this is the type of straight-ahead punk-pop that put them on the map 20 years ago.

No Doubt, "Push and Shove"

As far as long lapses between albums go, No Doubt's sixth studio album is up there with "Chinese Democracy" and "Detox," coming 11 years after its predecessor. Judging from the first two tunes to emerge, "Settle Down" and the title track, this album will be more worth the wait than the Guns N' Roses album that took 14 years to make.

Mumford & Sons, "Babel"

Coming three years after their 2009 debut, this British band's new single "I Will Wait" proves they waited until they were ready to release their best possible material, showing they are a group who has the ability to mine lush layers of harmonies to make timeless, uplifting tunes.

NOV. 6

Aerosmith, "Music From Another Dimension"

This album makes the list primarily because of its audacious title. Do Aerosmith have what it takes to make music from another dimension? We'll see.

NOV. 13

Big Boi, "Vicious Lies and Dangerous Rumors"

Did Big Boi and Aerosmith switch the album titles they were supposed to use? Big Boi is indeed tapping into another dimension with his second album outside of the Outkast moniker. For "Lies," the rapper has enlisted the assistance of indie bands such as Phantogram and Little Dragon.

50 Cent, "Street King Immortal"

Remember when Kanye and 50 released an album on the same day and each of them said that he would retire if his album didn't perform as well as the other's? "Curtis" didn't do as well as "Graduation," but 50 did not retire. On his fifth album, he has brought in enough guest stars that it seems like he's trying to compete with "Cruel Summer" for sheer group effort. So far "Immortal" will feature Alicia Keys, Lil' Kim, Akon, Swizz Beatz, Busta Rhymes, Eminem, Chris Brown and Adam Levine.

G.O.O.D. Music, "Cruel Summer"

"Ain't nobody fresher than my motherf—ing clique," raps Big Sean on one of the 12 tracks on Kanye West's latest collaborative project. Big Sean is right: In addition to him, Kanye corralled longtime pals like Jay-Z and Pusha T, younger acts like Teyana Taylor and CyHi the Prynce as well as Hall-of-Famers like R. Kelly and Ghostface Killah. The album happily arrives while its title season is still here.

Kanye West and Jay-Z are just two out of, like, a thousand of the artists appearing on "Cruel Summer."

On tour this fall

SEPTEMBER

Peter Gabriel
The "Back to Front" tour promises to deliver what its title suggests, with songs that span Gabriel's entire career, and probably draw heavily from his 1986 classic, "So," which comes out in a big 25th-anniversary edition next month. Sept. 21, Wells Fargo Center

Twin Shadow
Twin Shadow's sophomore album "Confess" picks up at the perfect moment where the debut left off. There's a warm sensibility to George Lewis Jr.'s lyrics, and the songs exude an icy cool that makes them feel like they could have been produced in the 1980s. But this is no studio trickery; live, the band faithfully reproduces the record's sound. Sept. 25, Union Transfer

David Byrne with St. Vincent
David Byrne kind of owned "Love This Giant," the collaborative album he just released with St. Vincent. But the dude is a giant of sorts, having helped give birth to America's new wave movement in the late 1970s. That said, we hope Annie Clark (aka St. Vincent) will step to the front more for the live shows, as she's a real monster on the guitar. Sept. 27, Tower Theatre, Upper Darby

Gotye
The "Somebody That I Used To Know" singer continues his bid to be more than just somebody that you used to know. The French musician's live show features elaborately timed film projections and an artsy delivery that will reward attendees who go to the show just to see him play that one song. Sept. 29, Susquehanna Bank Center, Camden, N.J.

OCTOBER

Alabama Shakes
This bluesy rock band blew away everybody who saw them this spring. Then all of those people told all their friends about it. Now the Shakes are back (and at bigger venues), ready to accommodate all of those people and their friends. Oct. 1, Electric Factory

The Walkmen
"Heaven," the Walkmen's recent mainstream effort, didn't feel quite as deep as their previous releases, but watching singer Hamilton Leithauser in-person may change the way you feel about that. The way he expels perfect-pitch yells will make you wonder why they didn't just do the album live.
Oct. 6, Electric Factory

▶ Alabama Shakes

▶ Twin Shadow

Waka Flocka Flame
Watching Waka live is kind of like seeing a one-man Wu-Tang. It's not always easy to know what is going on if you don't know the tracks already, but it's guaranteed fun. Oct. 10, The TLA

▶ The Who

Catch 'em while you can

"Hope I die before I get old"? Yeah, right. Many of these musicians have entered their seventh decade. They may have hearing problems, but none of them seem to have rocking problems. Actually, Bob Dylan and Leonard Cohen don't "rock" per se, in the traditional way, but their poetry rocks!

▶ Bob Dylan, Nov. 19, Wells Fargo Center

▶ Neil Young & Crazy Horse (with Patti Smith), Nov. 29, Wells Fargo Center

▶ The Who, Dec. 8, Wells Fargo Center

Dispatch
Dispatch was once a jammy Boston band that seemed like a fluke success story. They had earned a loyal following but decided to call it quits in 2004 and played a farewell show. That show drew 100,000 people. They'd get together occasionally to play reunion shows, but now with a brand-new album, "Circles Around the Sun," they appear to be in it to win it again. Cape Cod-based "don't-miss" act the Parkington Sisters opens.
Oct. 12, Tower Theatre, Upper Darby

Rush
If you haven't already checked out set lists for the shows that Rush have played on this tour so far, you'll be relieved to know that a concert earlier this week included these notes: "Where's My Thing?" (with drum solo), "Headlong Flight" (with drum solo) and "Drum Solo" (The Percussor). Not only do they do two songs with drum solos, but Neil Peart plays one drum solo so immense that it has its own title!

OCTOBER

Beach House
Fall is a chill season that awakens somber feelings of death and a hope for renewal. That's kind of what Beach House do as well. Oct. 16, Union Transfer

Father John Misty
Josh Tillman has played on his own and with bands like Fleet Foxes, but under his current moniker he seems to have really found his voice. His songs are folky, confident and evocatively weird. Consider this lyric: "Pour me another drink and punch me in the face / You can call me Nancy." And go see him before everybody else learns how cool he is. Oct. 21, Union Transfer

NOVEMBER

John Legend
John Legend's lover-man soul music is the perfect date-night concert, setting the mood for what happens after the show. But if you catch opening act Lianne La Havas, you might have to leave to get intimate with whomever you brought with you before the headliner even takes the stage. Nov. 1, Tower Theatre, Upper Darby

Smashing Pumpkins
Billy is back, with musicians who didn't play on the original recordings of the songs that made his band famous. So what? They'll still play all those songs. Need proof? The first three songs from a set in South Korea last month were "Zero," "Bullet With the Butterfly Wings" and "Today." Nov. 2, Susquehanna Bank Center, Camden, N.J.

Justin Bieber
The Biebs! If you're going, you already bought tickets to this show months ago. If you're not planning on going, there's really not much we can tell you to persuade you to say, "Hmmm, I think I'm going to go out and buy Justin Bieber tickets." Carly "Call Me Maybe" Rae Jepsen is opening. Did that work? Nov. 4, Wells Fargo Center PAT HEALY

▶ Dory and Nemo get caught up in a school of fish in the newly triple-dimensional "Finding Nemo 3-D."

DISNEY/PIXAR

'Finding Nemo' swims back into theaters in 3-D

For those eagerly awaiting the sequel, which is scheduled to be released in 2016, this 3-D version of the 2003 classic will hopefully "tide" them over (no pun intended ... well, OK, it was intended). In this film, a lost little clown fish named Nemo befriends a scatterbrained regal tang fish named Dory while in search of his father. METRO

'Resident Evil: Retribution'

Director: Paul W.S. Anderson
Cast: Milla Jovovich, Michelle Rodriguez
Rating: R Grade: ●●●○○

SONY PICTURES PUBLICITY

▶ Milla Jovovich gives yet another muscular performance in "Retribution."

While he is inarguably an ace stylist and orchestrator of action, director Paul Anderson isn't much of a writer. It's this latter factor that causes many a critic to dismiss his ongoing "Resident Evil" films as dross. But taken as visceral, audio visual thrill rides, they're rather brilliant. This fifth entry is a gigantic, mind-bending sensorial rush, with meticulous 3-D photography, nonstop action and yet another astonishing physical performance from Anderson's wife, actress Mila Jovovich, as Alice, a zombie- and monster-killer extraordinaire. The film is structured like the video games it was based on, so forget the plot and again, don't go searching for Shakespearean exchanges of dialogue. But as far as bloody, scary and even visionary pulp violent filmmaking goes, "Resident Evil: Retribution" is the best entry since the cult classic first. CHRIS ALEXANDER

The act of mourning

Two Fringe shows invite audiences to attend staged wakes Beware of undead 'Mummer' this weekend

Among the dozens of offerings this weekend at the Philly Fringe, two separate productions will cast audiences as mourners in funeral ceremonies. On Saturday, Fringe-goers will have an opportunity to attend two pretend wakes in one day.

The macabre fun begins at 4 p.m. in South Philly with "The Last Mummer." Developed by local theater veterans Wally Zialcita and Rick Horner, the show is a sequel to their 2010 Fringe offering. This time, they've reimagined their main character as a ghost, haunting his own futuristic funeral. And, in this tale, the future does not fare well for Mummers, Philadelphians or the world at large.

"For us, it's about experimenting with a genre — gothic and horror. By inhabiting this postapocalyptic funeral, we want to explore the elements of the genre even further: grief, fear, madness and some sort of release from all that," explains Zialcita.

By 10 p.m., the second wake, "The Funeral of Enerio Lopez," will kick off in North Philly. Written and performed by recent Swarthmore grad Lori Felipe-Barkin, this one-woman show looks at familial grief in a Cuban-American family. All the while, the audience is instructed to partake by crying, laughing and — a common theme of every funeral — impolite conversation.

"I've always been fascinated by the amount of life and theatricality that happens at a funeral," says Barkin. "It's a natural breeding ground for all kinds of interesting behaviors."

‘Weeds’ series finale airs Sunday ◗ Creator Jenji Kohan and star Mary-Louise Parker reflect on their anti-heroine

As eight seasons of “Weeds” come to a close, one lingering question regarding pot-selling mom Nancy Botwin remains: Is she an indomitable provider for her family or the worst mother ever?

“I never want to resolve that,” series creator Jenji Kohan says. “I mean, one of the main premises of ‘Weeds’ is this gray area, that no one is black and white, that no one’s the worst mother or the greatest mother, that everyone is a mess to a certain extent and you’re not defined by how you’re behaving on one specific day.”

The woman who brought Nancy to life, actress Mary-Louise Parker, believes that realistic dichotomy — illegal endeavors aside, perhaps — is what has made the character so endearing.

MICHAEL DESMOND/SHOWTIME

▶ Goodbye, Nancy Botwin! The “Weeds” series finale airs Sunday at 10 p.m. on Showtime.

“She’s guileless,” Parker says. “She just continues to make the wrong choices. Her heart’s usually in the right place, and she just can’t be defeated, and she keeps trying. When I distill her into one thing, that’s what I think about … and what I like about her.”

As for how Nancy’s story ends, neither woman will reveal details. But Parker says she cried when she read the final script.

“[Kohan] didn’t make it a total happily-ever-after thing — but there was hope in it, and there was some sort of benediction,” Parker says of the series closer. “I think the finale is beautifully written,” she adds, “and I hope it lives up to what she wrote. I mean that, really.”

A downward spiral for Amanda Bynes

Amanda Bynes is refusing rehab, according to RadarOnline.com. Apparently her friends are worried she's not "in touch with reality," as if there is anyone in Hollywood who is. Still, this story gives me a touch of the sads.

A small refresher of her recent troubles: The 26-year-old was charged last week with two hit-and-run charges and was arrested on April 6 for a DUI. On Thursday, TMZ.com posted pictures of the actress driving aimlessly around L.A. on a suspended license and smoking from a metal pipe from behind the wheel.

"Amanda is refusing to go to rehab or seek any form of psychiatric treatment or diagnosis. It's clear something is up with her," a "friend" exclusively told RadarOnline.

"She has been told by her agent and her dad Rick that she has substance abuse issues and needs to get help. She's a lost little girl right now. Amanda's completely gone off the grid. She won't speak with her manager, her agent, her publicist; she's not returning anybody's phone calls," the source said.

An actress who won't speak with her agent or her publicist? In Hollywood, there's no worse indication that something bad is going down.

Quinto and Groff: Hot item

Zachary Quinto is opening up about his relationship with "Glee" actor Jonathan Groff, telling Out magazine, "I'm incredibly happy." Quinto says he's feeling especially good about being in a relationship following the death of his father. "I had to do a lot of work on the couch to really get to a place where I was able to show up to a relationship with someone who was actually capable of being in one — and that took a lot of trial and error," he says.

THADDEUS PHILLIPS

▶ "Red-Eye to Havre de Grace" goes on an otherworldly ride with Poe.

If you're seeing: "Red-Eye to Havre de Grace" (Friday-Sunday, Suzanne Roberts Theatre, 480 S. Broad St.)
Have dinner at: Russet (1521 Spruce St.)
Nestled unassumingly into a converted row house near the Avenue of the Arts, Russet has a lived-in, vaguely haunted quality that'll pair perfectly with "Red-Eye to Havre de Grace," a reimagining of Edgar Allan Poe's final days by Lucidity Suitcase Intercontinental. The BYO's super-seasonal menu is flirting with fall, meaning the debut of moody, Edgar-approved dishes like roasted acorn squash ravioli.
Have drinks at: Moshulu (401 S. Columbus Blvd.)
Before the Moshulu was converted into a restaurant at Penn's Landing, it was cruising international waters. Almost 30 people have died aboard the boat since it launched in 1904, leading some to believe it's haunted. We're not so sure about that — but we do know there's a fully stocked bar on the water.

▶ Hot stuff: Han Dynasty doesn't do mild.

If you're seeing: "Hot Pepper, Air Conditioner and the Farewell Speech" (Sept. 19-22, Christ Church Neighborhood House, 20 N. American St.)
Have drinks at: The Khyber (56 S. Second St.)
Toshiki Okada's trio of plays focuses on the humorous banality and intimate madness of office life (seems they're not much better off in Japan). Prepare at the Khyber, where generations of pencil-pushing Philadelphians have attempted to forget the previous eight hours of their lives. And go ahead, order a snack — the rebooted Khyber serves a full menu.
Then have dinner at: Han Dynasty (108 Chestnut St.)
Because there is no hotter pepper in Old City — or Philadelphia, for that matter. Han Chiang serves his Sichuan dishes hot, hotter and hottest, and he isn't big on compromise.

MEREDITH EDLOW

▶ The Trestle Inn is also hosting a Fringe production, "Othello, Desdemona & Iago Walk Into A Bar."

If you're seeing: "Arguendo" (Sunday, Arden Theatre Company, 40 N. Second St.)
Have drinks at: The Trestle Inn (339 N. 11th St.)
Elevator Repair Service's production centers on a 1991 lawsuit in which a group of erotic dancers claimed their wardrobe, or lack thereof, was protected by the First Amendment. Examine the issue at the iconic Trestle Inn, which is once again serving up whiskey and go-go.

Curtain call

Drink to this

If you're not ready to go home, the good people behind Live Arts and Philly Fringe have set up an official festival bar at Underground Arts (1200 Callowhill St.) for audiences and artists to catch up over drinks. Thirsty but have no intention of stepping inside a theater? You're invited, too. Visit www.latenitecabaret.com for a schedule of entertainment.

Vernick keeps it fresh

Chef Greg Vernick is back in Philly with a seasonal menu, inventive drinks and plenty of tasty tips Where he's shopping this weekend

STUART GOLDENBERG

▶ Weekend must-snack list: Greg Vernick's "on toast" menu, our favorite thing since sliced grilled bread.

Hot chef

Greg Vernick is the man behind the name at Vernick Food & Drink. The Cherry Hill native has worked in kitchens all over the U.S., but now he's back on home turf in Philly, serving up fresh, season-centric fare and refreshing drinks for everyone at the table.

What brought about your non-alcoholic "mocktail" menu?
It didn't come from an alcohol versus non-alcohol point. We were making seasonal sodas, and my beverage manager came up with a few ideas of how to use the sodas and syrups we were making.

Where do you go when you need to get out of your own kitchen?
On a nice night I like Morgan's Pier. It's one of the best views in the city, and it's tasty food.

If you go

Vernick Food & Drink
2031 Walnut St.
www.vernickphilly.com

And Mama's [Vegetarian] for falafel. They make a sandwich that you eat, then you crave it again when you're done. Plus, it's close to the restaurant.

When you go out, is it typically in the neighborhood?
A lot of times. The staff goes to Bonner's a lot, over on 23rd. They get along really well with everyone there, so they kind of congregate there. It's a nice camaraderie. Or sometimes we'll all go to Chinatown for late-night dinners.

Yum — any Chinatown tips for us?
Usually David's Mai Lai Wah, but sometimes we just end up wherever.

JULIA WEST
letters@metro.us

Your menu relies on fresh, seasonal and local ingredients. Can you share your shopping secrets?

We like to use the Rittenhouse Farmers Market because it's two blocks away, so it supports the neighborhood and the farmers. And we go to Headhouse Farmers Market on Sundays for similar vendors. If you walk through the market in the morning, you can still kind of smell the dirt and the farm.

Farmer Dean Carlson is teaming up with Pub & Kitchen chef Jonathan Adams for a five-course dinner starring ingredients from Wyebrook Farm, a super sweet 350-acre patch of Chester County. The menu ($80 per person) is full of late-summer treats, but it's the dining room we're really craving: the candlelit top floor of the farm's 18th-century barn. All we've got to fear is losing our dream

RE: "HELPING THEM TO REMEMBER TO NEVER FORGET" (METRO, SEPT. 11) Outside of the history lesson, what else about that terrible day do we need to teach the post-9/11 generation? Hopefully not to fear everything Islamic, or to live in paranoia. Someone said these kids must be taught to be "alert and aware." But why? Should we also teach them to be "alert and aware" of homegrown militia "patriots" like Tim McVeigh? How about disturbed people who attend Batman films? 9/11 was a bad thing that happened many years ago. Those of us who were alive certainly won't forget 9/11 — but for these kids, it's akin to teaching them about Pearl Harbor. When we learned about Dec. 7, 1941, in school, it was that it was a tragic, cowardly attack — we weren't taught to cultivate a paranoid fear of, say, airplanes flying overhead, or of the Japanese. Remember that it's military intelligence, and that alone, which has kept us free of future attacks since 9/11, not all of us staying "alert and aware." Very little of that citizen vigilance and paranoia has made us safer, and in fact runs counter to the "American dream."
RICHARD FEINBERG, VIA E-MAIL

Some people just don't know their foreign facts

RE: "ROMNEY'S ACCOUNT OF EGYPT EMBASSY ATTACK FLAWED" (METRO, SEPT. 13) Mitt Romney's irresponsible reaction to the attack on the U.S. consulate in Libya once again shows he is unfit to assume a command role on the world stage. In his rush to politicize an unfolding tragedy, Mr. Romney condemned President Obama before anyone knew fully what was going on. This confirms that Mitt Romney will say and do anything to get elected, exploit a national tragedy. Such ineptitude in foreign policy matters should give Americans much to fear in a Romney presidency.
JEAN INGLIS, VIA E-MAIL

Mitt Romney's response to the latest Middle East crisis was shameful. Rather than expressing outrage over the attacks and murder of American diplomats, Romney blamed President Obama and accused him of "sympathizing with the attackers." Are you kidding me? That is not the statement of a leader. There have been many outlandish statements made this election cycle but this may be the worst. Statements like this show why America cannot risk having a national security/foreign policy novice at the helm. The Romney/Ryan ticket has no national security/foreign policy experience and that is dangerous in a global world. CARL HANSON, VIA E-MAIL

RE: "NO CREDIT WHERE CREDIT'S DUE" (METRO, SEPT. 13) Cult or party: Michael J. Frosch's column's regarding the percentage of Republicans in Ohio believing that Mitt Romney should either get full and/or partial credit for the death of Osama bin Laden has gotten me thinking that the Republican Party is looking more and more like a cult rather than the proud party it once was.

What to watch for Sunday

1 Can they keep up? — Jim Washburn's defensive line prides itself on attacking the ball on every snap. They're aggressive, relentless — and they stay fresh by rotating in a batch of 8-9 linemen. Problem is, against the Ravens' no-huddle attack, it's going to be very hard to keep subbing.

2 All eyes on Vick — Mike Vick is 5-0 dating back to last season. Marty Mornhinweg made sure to point that out. However, Vick has taken a lot of hits and thrown a ton of picks in his last two seasons. He can look superb, like that throw to Maclin down the sideline — or atrocious, like that cross-body pick. Which Vick is going to show up? Will he play all four quarters?

3 Receiving the call — Jeremy Maclin looks to be game-time call, with a bum hip. DeSean Jackson sat out Thursday with a sore hamstring. That doesn't bode well for the Birds, who lack little depth at WR. With Riley Cooper out, that leaves Damaris Johnson, Jason Avant and Mardy Gilyard.

Last week: Eagles 17, Browns 16 Sunday: vs. Baltimore, 1 p.m. (CBS)

Ravens all huddled up and waiting for Birds

Eagles look to slow no-huddle offense in Week 2 ◗ Matchup could pose problems for defensive-line rotation ◗ Reid closes down practices to media

Baltimore, a town known for crab cakes with a football team known for its defense, changed its identity in one swift, dominating swoop.

Baltimore is now firmly on the offensive.

The Ravens' new-look, no-huddle offense gave the Bengals a free clinic Monday night, racking up 430 yards in a 44-13 rout. Quarterback Joe Flacco looked like a man possessed as he finished 21-of-29 and chilled on the sideline for the final eight minutes with the game out of reach.

According to Football Outsiders, the Ravens were in the hurry-up on 36.2 percent (21-of-58) of their offensive plays. And Flacco described the Ravens' offense as "100 percent no-huddle."

Either way, the quick-strike attack is sure to pose a problem for the Eagles, a team that likes to rotate defensive linemen in and out to keep them fresh.

"A lot of people question how [you are] going to defend with this rotation you got," Trent Cole said. "Trust me, we have an answer. I believe in my heart we have an answer. Some guys are going to have to stay out there longer, but we know those guys that are staying out there longer are going to get the job done."

GETTY IMAGES

▶ Flacco threw for 299 yards and two touchdowns in the Ravens' 44-13 win in Week 1.

When asked specifically how they would rotate guys, Jason Babin replied, "There's unique ways to substitute. We'll leave it at that."

Babin's comment was telling since it came on the day coach Andy Reid barred reporters from attending practices. Previously, the Eagles had allowed the media to view the team at work on Thursdays and Fridays. The new policy is in line with 27 other NFL teams, according to Reid.

"My No. 1 priority here is to win football games and to put the best product on the field," Reid said.

Mathews up

The Chargers expected to ride Ronnie Brown until Ryan Mathews returned. It took them a quarter to change their minds. Brown is slow, out of gas and washed up. When Mathews gets back, likely in Week 3, he's going to push for monster workloads.

IS THE SKY REALLY FALLING?

Overreactions are natural in all forms of life. Stock market went down? We're all going broke. Can't get rid of that cough? Find the nearest deathbed.

Fantasy stud face-planted? Cut him. Making rash decisions after Week 1 is always a bad idea. But there were a few interesting subplots that could be a sign of things to come.

GETTY IMAGES

▶ Bills running back C.J. Spiller is in line to steal Fred Jackson's spot for good.

Clashed Titan

A bad game against the Patriots is usually nothing to get alarmed about. But when we take Chris Johnson's four-yard outing in context with his disastrous 2011 campaign, we have a problem. CJ?K continues to dance his way into holes and fail to break tackles. Even worse, his offensive line appeared inept. Don't sell Johnson low, but shopping him after a good game might yield a positive expectation.

Slot machine

Wes Welker has had a fistful of games like his three-catch, 15-yard performance last Sunday. The difference this time was usage. Welker almost always gets about 90 percent of the snaps and racks up double-digit targets per game. But in this one, he was on the field for just 64.2 percent of the offensive plays as Julian Edelman rotated into the slot. Perhaps the Patriots are beginning to phase out Welker, who is in the final year of his contract.

Cleanup Spiller

Fred Jackson went down, and C.J. Spiller went off. Sound familiar? When Jackson missed the final six games last year, Spiller averaged 105.5 total yards and scored five touchdowns. Over his last 17 games, he's averaged 6.03 yards per carry. Jackson is out for at least a month, but the team is still waiting to see how the knee injury progresses before making a final call. Spiller is the real deal and a weekly top-5 option going forward. Don't be surprised if he keeps the gig.

Hype police

GETTY IMAGES

▶ Ogletree

Watch the waiver wire. And watch out for these guys. The Week 1 performances we're not buying:

1. Kevin Ogletree, WR, DAL— He took advantage of an injury-ravaged Giants' secondary. Ogletree isn't nearly as talented as Laurent Robinson.
2. Mark Sanchez, QB, NYJ — It was a perfect storm for the Jets against the Bills. That will be Sanchez's best performance of the season.
3. Ahmad Bradshaw, RB, NYG — The game tape shows a much slower and plodding runner than the stats suggest. If rookie David Wilson doesn't fumble, Bradshaw owners are in panic mode.

NFL pickups

Alfred Morris
RB, Redskins
Whoever starts at running back for Mike Shanahan is going to produce. For now, Morris is that starter.

Dexter McCluster
WR, Chiefs
McCluster is locked in as slot receiver, but the key here is eligibility. He can be used as a RB in a lot of formats.

Coby Fleener
TE, Colts
In a mild surprise, Fleener racked up 10 Week 1 targets, while Dwayne Allen saw zero passes his way.

New kids in bullpen showing right stuff

Phillies young arms breathing life into bullpen ◗ Bastardo, Aumont, DeFratus, Diekman finding grooves ◗ Manuel expresses his confidence

GETTY IMAGES

▶ Bastardo picked up his first save of the season Monday.

The eighth inning has been a nightmarish frame for the Phillies this season. It's been so bad that if the Phillies' set-up men had held on to half the games they blew in the trouble inning during the first three months, they would be battling the Braves for the top, wild-card slot.

But the worst appears to be over. Free agent disaster Chad Qualls was traded. Aging, broken-down Jose Contreras will never throw another pitch for the Phillies. The enigmatic Antonio Bastardo seems to be finding himself.

And then there is the quartet of IronPigs. Phillippe Aumont, Justin DeFratus and Jake Diekman were each called up in September. Diekman joined the Phillies earlier in the season, but was sent down to Triple-A in August.

It's a small sample set, but Aumont and DeFratus have pitched well under pressure. DeFratus has been spotless during four appearances, while holding opponents to a .111 batting average. Aumont has a 1.08 ERA, while holding the opposition to a .138 batting average.

Diekman is the least refined of the bunch, but the long, lanky southpaw has electric stuff, a funky arm angle and a 97-mph fastball.

"I like them all a lot," Charlie Manuel said. "Diekman is going to be real good someday, you watch. I love Aumont's size and his fastball. He's really powerful and DeFratus is a real good pitcher."

Perhaps DeFratus would have been up earlier this season if he didn't reinjure his right elbow in spring training.

"That could have been the case, but it didn't work out," DeFratus said. "All I know is that I'm here now and I'll do whatever I can to help out. But it's incredibly cool to be up here with my friends. We're all very close. We support and look out for each other."

Aumont was up and down in Lehigh Valley, but has been in a groove since arriving in the big leagues.

"I can't put my finger on it," Aumont said. "I just feel comfortable here. I'm really looking forward to the challenge every night."

Manuel believes his kiddie corps of relievers will benefit from the Phillies' race for a playoff spot.

"It'll give them some confidence and experience," Manuel said. "That's a good thing."

Legendary UConn coach announces retirement

One of the winningest coaches in college basketball history walked away Thursday.

After 873 wins, Jim Calhoun — the man who guided Connecticut to three national championships — retired. Calhoun, 70, had missed time over the past few seasons due to a back injury and frequent cancer treatments. He turns the program over to his former pupil — and former Sixers guard — Kevin Ollie.

"I am very honored and humbled to become the UConn men's basketball coach," Ollie told reporters. "I cannot put into words how grateful I am to coach Jim Calhoun, who retires today as one of the most legendary coaches in the history of college basketball."

Calhoun spent 26 seasons at UConn and put the school on the hoops map. He won 10 Big East regular-season championships and seven Big East Tournament titles. Calhoun was inducted into the Basketball Hall of Fame in 2005.

There was some turmoil, too. The Huskies are banned for postseason play this season due to poor classroom performance.

GETTY IMAGES

"There have been some bumps in the road, but we are headed in the right direction," Calhoun said. METRO
